STRAIT TALK

George Strait Sets a U.S. Concert-Attendance Record in a Musically Superb, Star-Laden Show

*Written by Joy Tipping/Staff Writer
Dallas Morning News*

ARLINGTON — That roar you heard or felt coming from here around 7:30 Saturday night? Earthquake? Tornado? Nope, but close: A force of nature named George Strait had just walked onstage at AT&T Stadium for the final show of his Cowboy Rides Away tour, a two-year, cross-country sweep that he says will be his last.

Dressed in a blue-checked Western shirt, jeans and his trademark black hat, the Poteet (south of San Antonio) native launched into the 1995 classic “Check Yes or No,” motivating the giddy crowd into its first of many singalongs.

The 104,793 people in attendance made history — the event marked a new record for largest indoor concert in North America, easily zapping the earlier high mark of around 87,500, set in 1981 by the Rolling Stones at the Louisiana Superdome. Coincidentally, 1981 is when Strait launched his career with the single “Unwound” and the album Strait Country.

At 10:40 p.m. Saturday, after 41 songs, nine superstar guest appearances (plus a couple of numbers with his son, songwriter-performer George Jr., known as Bubba) and hundreds of thousands of beers and sodas in George Strait souvenir cups consumed, the 62-year-old cowboy did indeed amble away — not riding, exactly, but no doubt buoyed by the crowd’s earsplitting cheers and what seemed like a never-ending standing (and jumping) ovation (many fans stood for the entire show).

If you weren’t there, you missed a landmark, musically superb evening, but don’t panic about King George: He hasn’t said he won’t do any more concerts, just that he’s quitting touring. He’ll no doubt play the Lone Star state in many shows to come: In fact, he’ll return to AT&T Stadium in April 2015 for the 50th anniversary Academy of Country Music Awards show (which sold out its 70,000 tickets in 18 minutes flat). Strait has been named entertainer of the year five times by country's high court, three times by the Country Music Association Awards, in 1989, 1990 and 2013, and twice by the ACMs, in 2009 and 2014. Amid a slew of other accolades, he won a 2009 Grammy for best country album for Troubadour, whose title cut was one of Saturday's standout numbers, showcasing both Strait's vocal integrity and his acumen at finding songs (that one's by Leslie Satcher and Monty Holmes) that bring the "traditional" back to country while also gathering adoration among the younger, more pop-oriented crowd.

With apologies to AT&T, Jerry Jones and the Dallas Cowboys, they might just as well re-name that big football-shaped building the George Strait Stadium right now and get it over with, because that's how a whole bunch of folks will think of it from now on. In 2009, Strait (along with Reba McEntire, Lee Ann Womack and Blake Shelton) opened the venue, playing to 60,188 fans.

For this show, Strait used a different stage configuration that allowed for the extra seats: a custom revolving stage set center field (he's only used it twice before, in Houston and San Antonio). It was the best concert set-up I've seen at the venue (others who've played here include Paul McCartney, Kenny Chesney and Taylor Swift; next up is One Direction on Aug. 24).

The always-iffy sound seemed about as good as you could hope to expect inside a big echoing stadium that was built for, well, football. I crept up as far as I could into the rafters, and even in the notoriously acoustically bad corners, the sound seemed better than usual. In the "good seats," the acoustics were noticeably less tinny and bouncy than I've heard in previous shows.

It helped that Strait was in perfect voice, that trademark mixture of caramel and whiskey never faltering during his three-hour show, which followed a rousing hour long set by Texas swing legends Asleep at the Wheel, led by the incendiary Ray Benson.

Speaking of fiery, one of Strait's best numbers was "The Fireman," sung with Chesney toward the end of the show. Other highlights included Strait's solo "Marina Del Rey," "Jackson" with Martina McBride, "Amarillo by Morning" with Alan Jackson and "A Showman's Life" with Faith Hill.

The audience showered special love on almost-hometown-girl Miranda Lambert, who hails from Lindale in East Texas and sang "Run" and "How 'Bout Them Cowgirls" with Strait. Lambert also gets the prize for edgiest attire; in a crowd full of floaty cowgirl dresses and pressed jeans, country's version of "dressed up," she wowed in a flirty new shorter hairdo (platinum, of course, like the title of her just-released fifth CD), black leather jacket and short-shorts, and sparkly silver boots. Strait and Lambert's voices melded gorgeously; they should consider cutting an album together, or at the very least releasing an EP of duets.

Other guest stars, all of whom oozed love and respect for Strait, were Vince Gill (who was limping; we hope he's OK), Jason Aldean, Eric Church and Sheryl Crow. For the three encores, "All My Ex's Live in Texas," "Folsom Prison Blues" and "The Cowboy Rides Away," Strait brought all the guests back on stage for what had to be one of the most star-studded 15 minutes in country-music history. Even on the big awards shows, you never see this many bona-fide superstars all singing together. Talk about generous: Strait also worked in plenty of moments for his backing Ace in the Hole band, a majority of whom are from Texas, to shine.

Strait's set list traversed nearly the full run of his career, from 1983's "Amarillo," to 2013's "I Got a Car," released in November as the third single from his latest CD, Love Is Everything. Along the way, Strait has racked up 60 No. 1 hits (another music-industry record) and sold more than 100 million records.

One of the evening's most uplifting, moving moments came with "I Believe," a 2013 single that was inspired by the 2012 elementary-school shootings in Newtown, Conn., where 20 children and 6 adults were murdered. "The rivers flow now that used to be dry/as people all over the world start to cry/But I believe," Strait sang, obvious tears in his eyes (and in about 200,000 eyes that were watching him).

Another snuffle-inducing interval arrived on the heels of U.S. Army Sgt. 1st Class Leroy Petry, a Medal of Honor recipient who saved other soldiers' lives in Afghanistan when, after being shot in both legs by Taliban fighters, grabbed a grenade and attempted to toss it away from them. Petry's right hand was severed and he now wears a prosthesis. At the concert, he and his wife were given a new home courtesy of the Military Warrior Support Foundation, which Strait has partnered with on this tour, giving away a mortgage-free residence to a wounded combat veteran at each concert.

As is his custom, Strait wasted little time on banter, but when he did address the audience, it was with obvious love and thanks. "Mutual-admiration society" has never been a more appropriate phrase than it was for this show. The most fitting and sentimental (in the best possible way) number had to be "I'll Always Remember You," which features the lyrics, "I'm not saying I'm through by any means/ There's still things I want to say and do."

Yep, George, we believe you do. And we'll be right here waiting when you decide to ride back out. And hey, Potteet and San Antonio, no offense, but after this show, George Strait is ours.

Anita's Notes

Welcome to the Fall issue of Strait Talk. What a wonderful first half of the year. The 32nd Annual GSTRC, The 2014 "Cowboy Rides Away" tour and the Finale at A.T & T. Stadium in Arlington, Texas. After the Finale, there was time to look back at the amazing moments we have had. Personally, the A.T & T Stadium show blew me away. 105 thousand fans were there for a reason.....Their love for George Strait! Adding Jason Aldean, Kenny Chesney, Eric Church, Sheryl Crow, Vince Gill, Faith Hill, Alan Jackson, Miranda Lambert, Martina McBride and Asleep at the Wheel, was just the icing on the cake. The energy and emotion was unbelievable. Each act added a Thank You to George in their own words, for what he has meant to them during his long and illustrious career. As they each spoke, the sincerity was so apparent and the tears flowed both off and on the stage. I think it was also apparent to most that the King of Country Music shed a few of his own.

It is important for all the fans to realize that George Strait will be heard from again. He still has five CD's left for MCA, the first of which will be released on Sept. 16th and will consist of live performances from the Finale show. In addition to that, CMT will broadcast a 2-hour special of the Final performance in Arlington on August 29th. In addition, while he is taking a break and will not be doing a regular yearly tour, George does have other projects up his sleeve and you will see him in certain places down the road. Keep your ears open and your eyes on our website for any updates.

The 33rd Annual George Strait Team Roping Classic dates have been set for March 13th & 14th of 2015 at the San Antonio Rose Palace. Tickets for George Strait Fan Club members will go on sale on September 22nd. Remaining tickets available to the general public will go on sale on October 6th. Please read the entire store on the event elsewhere in Strait Talk for all the pertinent details. We can't wait to see you all again next year. This is always my top event of the year as we get a chance to visit with so many GSFC members. It's a great time to catch up. And of course, since it is so laid back, it is the perfect time to see George and his family in a very relaxed atmosphere, not to mention the greatest team roping in the world.

As you know, we no longer have printed copies of Strait Talk that we mail out to Fan Club members so please make sure we have your correct email address so we can make sure you get your copy. We also have many announcements during the year and want to make sure that you don't miss any of them.

You will notice that we don't have our Christmas Sweatshirts, Mugs and Ornaments in this issue of Strait Talk but you will be able to view them online in the General Store in the near future. We will send you a notification when they are ready.

We hope that you all have had a great summer and want you to have a wonderful fall with your families and friends. We are also anxiously looking forward to telling you about some other special projects in the early fall. So stay tuned!

That's it for now but let's please continue to pray for our servicemen and women around the world who are doing their very best to keep our country free and strong. Also, please keep their families in your prayers as well. In the meantime, let's Keep the Country STRAIT!
